4. Program Objectives and Use of Commodity:

A. The commodity authorized herein is contributed by the United States to be utilized in a one-year pilot reforestation program to be administered by the Ministry of Agriculture of the Government of Peru in cooperation with Catholic Relief Services. The immediate and long-term objectives of the program are, respectively: (a) to provide gainful employment and increased food consumption to families whose living conditions are sub-standard; and (b) to promote economic development by putting into production non-productive areas owned by indigenous communities through a tree planting program.

B. Approximately 6250 acres of forest plantations will be established in each of the Departments of Cuzco and Junin by planting an estimated 12.5 million eucalyptus trees on non-agricultural land owned by indigenous communities. During the first phase of this experimental program, about 200 of an estimated 1200 workers drawn from the various communities involved will be engaged in establishing nurseries and collecting seed from presently available eucalyptus trees. The remaining 1000 will be employed in preparing planting sites and digging planting holes for the planting period to follow.

C. The commodity authorized herein shall be used as partial payment-in-kind of wages to workers employed in the program on the basis of days of work performed, estimated at 200 work days annually per worker for the program approved herein. Each worker shall receive a daily ration for himself and dependents for each day of work performed. Based on an average of five members per family, distribution of the commodity supplied hereunder and for the other commodities on this program shall average approximately as follows:
