Assuming success of the pilot phase, it is currently the intention of the Governments of Peru and the United States to continue and mutually agree to expand the program thereafter under a longer term cooperative arrangement. Such continuation will be dependent, however, upon (a) commodity availability from the United States, (b) continued existence in both countries of legal authority and/or appropriations for this type of activity, and (c) reaching agreement on terms mutually satisfactory to both governments. In connection with this specialized future cooperation, the Governments of Peru and the United States recognize that the feeding of school children in Peru is a Peruvian responsibility and that the Government of Peru, therefore, should at an appropriate time in the future begin progressively to assume increased responsibility for the program and to take over full responsibility as quickly thereafter as circumstances permit.
